

Traveling with Fido in Tualatin Valley

Dog-Friendly Getaways

PET-FRIENDLY LODGING

Tualatin Valley's pet-friendly lodging options range from budget to boutique hotels. These properties offer special pet packages:

- The Orenco, a small, upscale boutique property in Hillsboro, offers a "Pampered Pet" package for small dogs for an additional $15 per night, which includes a dog bed, a dog bone and other pet amenities.
- The newly renovated McMenamins Grand Lodge, which added new rooms and updated half of its rooms to include in-room bathrooms, now allows dogs at its property.
- The new Aloft Hotel in Hillsboro also pampers pooches, with its "Arf" program, which provides four-legged guests with a special bed, bowl and a "doggie" bag of treats.
- For campers, L.L. Stub Stewart State Park is a full-service state park with tent camping, RV sites and rustic cabins (including two pet-friendly cabins), and more than 30 miles of multi-use on-leash and off-leash trails.

DOG-FRIENDLY WINERIES

Tualatin Valley's winemakers love their dogs, and many four-legged friends can be found sniffing the terroir and welcoming visitors into the tasting room.

Dogs are so ubiquitous at wineries, the book "Wine Dogs USA" celebrates those wineries who count happy pooches as a part of their crews.

Dogs are allowed at many wineries throughout the region (please call before visiting to ensure that dogs are allowed).

Located in western Tualatin Valley, Plum Hill Vineyards has been recognized as being one of the most dog-friendly wineries in the U.S. Not only are dogs allowed in the tasting room, where they are served biscuits, a fenced-in park on the site allows canines to run and play.

Each summer, dozens of Tualatin Valley wineries open their doors to wine lovers and their pooches during the Canines Uncorked wine-tasting event. This one-of-a-kind event provides treats and paws-on activities for dogs.

ADDITIONAL THINGS TO KNOW WHILE TRAVELING WITH DOGS IN TUALATIN VALLEY*

- Dogs are not allowed at any of Tualatin Valley's nature parks or wildlife preserves and refuges.
- Dogs are not allowed at farmers markets; however, the Saturday Beaverton Farmers Market has a "doggy day care."
- Coffeehouses and restaurants with outdoor patio seating may allow dogs.

Service dogs are allowed.
